The ‘Native American Zodiac’

A COMPLETE DEEP DIVE

A Pan-Tribal Invention, Its Real Sources, and Why It Deserves a Harder Look Than the Others

THE ‘PAN-TRIBAL’ MYTH

- Twelve animals, twelve birth-date ranges
- Marketed under the name of hundreds of distinct nations
- That never built this system
- Never share a single unified spiritual tradition
- And were never consulted in its construction

CRITICAL INQUIRY & INDIGENOUS PERSPECTIVES

“It erases the specificity of our actual traditions.”
- A Scholar (fictionalized)

“We are not a marketing category.”
- Indigenous Community Voice (fictionalized)

“Date ranges are a giveaway of invention, not authenticity.”
- Haligric Research Analysis

CELTIC TREE ASTROLOGY

A COMPLETE DEEP DIVE

The Beth-Luis-Nion Calendar, Robert Graves, and a Twentieth-Century Invention Wearing Ancient Clothing.

Thirteen trees, thirteen lunar months, a birth-date calendar as familiar in form as the Western zodiac — and a system that did not exist before 1948.

This is the story of how a working poet's act of visionary scholarship became received wisdom: how a real, ancient script of notches carved into stone was rewired into a calendar its own namesakes never used, and how that invention took on a life so convincing that millions now read their "tree sign" without knowing whose imagination are standing inside. Not a debunking. A full account — the real Ogham, the invented Ogham, and everything both revealed and obscured in the space between them.

The Sacred Count of Days

A COMPLETE DEEP DIVE

The Maya Zodiac — the Tzolk'in, the Twenty Day Signs, and the Living Day-Keeper Tradition.

Long before the pyramids of Tikal stood finished, the Maya had already answered a harder question: not how to measure a year, but how to read the character of a single day. Two wheels turn against each other, one of twenty named signs and one of thirteen numbers, and take 260 days to return to where they began. That number has never been fully explained by astronomy alone — and it was never meant to be. In the highlands of Guatemala today, a day-keeper still burns copal at dawn, still counts the days on her fingers in base twenty, and still tells a family which of the twenty sacred names was born on the day their child arrived. arrived. This was never a museum calendar. It never stopped running.
